The house is entered on the raised ground floor into a hallway with the main living room to the left and cloak room to one end. The living room is double size with beautiful cornicing, bay window with shutters, fireplaces, high ceilings and doors at the rear to a glass floored roof terrace.

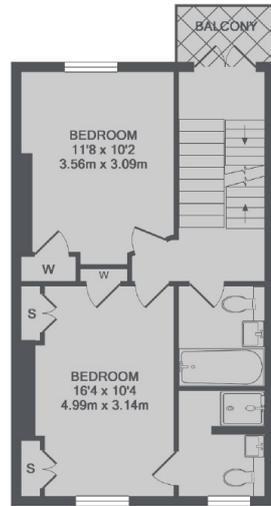

The lower ground floor has an extremely spacious shaker style kitchen with all new appliances and marble worktops. The whole lower ground floor is open giving a really versatile space for living, dining and for children to enjoy. There is lots of natural light from the glass ceiling below the terrace, underfloor heating through out and frameless sliding doors to the terraced garden.

On the first floor is the master bedroom suite with underfloor heating, dressing room and a magnificent bathroom finished with marble and a freestanding stone bath. The upper two floors contain the remaining three double bedrooms and three bathrooms including the top floor suite with en-suite shower and a south easterly facing balcony with wide ranging views over central London.

The house has been lovingly refurbished and expanded with every effort made to seamlessly blend modern features whilst retaining period charm. In particular, bespoke features have been introduced providing lots of natural light to all areas of the house using glass walled areas, and bi-folding windows as a couple of examples of this dedication.
